

Defining Zero Forcing

Michael Young, Carnegie Mellon University

Zero forcing is a graph parameter most commonly defined via a combinatorial color-change rule, but admits several alternative and equivalent formulations. This expository talk surveys several of these definitions and highlight the kinds of questions it each is best suited to address. The emphasis is on developing intuition and understanding the strengths and limitations of each formulation.

Keywords: zero forcing, graph sequence, domination, covering