

Balanced and Unbalanced Split Graphs

Karen Collins, Wesleyan University, and Ann N Trenk*, Wellesley College

A graph is a split graph if its vertex set can be partitioned into a clique and an independent set. A split graph is unbalanced if there exist two such partitions that are distinct. We survey results about balanced and unbalanced split graphs and provide short proofs that these classes can be recognized by their degree sequences and that all threshold graphs are unbalanced split graphs.

Keywords: split graphs