

Revisiting domination number of trees

Farhad Shahrokhi*, University of North Texas

We revisit the domination number of a tree. We present a new linear time algorithm that establishes the equality between domination number and cardinality of a largest 2-packing. The result is a consequence of a more general result establishing an upper bound on number of edges required to cover vertices of a hypergraph. We also discuss this result and additional applications.

Keywords: domination number, hypergraph